3. Where it is not possible to provide actual information to comply with the notice, JEN has, to the best of my information, knowledge and belief:

¹ For the purposes of this declaration, true and accurate means the information is an accurate reflection of JEN's financial accounting records or other records used in the normal course of business or is calculated or derived from information recorded in such records.

NOTES ON FORM OF STATUTORY DECLARATION

The AER's regulatory information notice dated 17 October 2024 (Notice) included a form of statutory declaration. The AER requested that a statutory declaration in this form be signed by an officer of JEN. Other than the clarifications explained in these Notes, the statutory declaration of Shaun Reardon dated 28 January 2025 is in the form in the Notice.

JEN has added the words "and except where expressly stated otherwise" and, as a footnote to the declaration, JEN has added the words "For the purposes of this declaration true and accurate means the information is an accurate reflection of JEN's financial accounting records or other records used in the normal course of business or is calculated or derived from information recorded in such records."

This is because the information provided in response to the Notice that is the subject of the declaration includes financial information. The nature of financial information is that assumptions are often required, thereby creating multiple valid answers rather than a single true and accurate answer.

On the basis that there may be more than one materially suitable or possible way to present information in response to the Notice, JEN's assurance process clarified that information presented in the Notice would be true and accurate where that information is an accurate representation of JEN's internal business records or is calculated or derived from information recorded in such records. On this basis, a clarification was made to the statutory declaration in line with the quality assurance process supporting the declaration. This does not change the level of verification that the statutory declaration provides the AER.
